Therapists who rent a room in clinics or medical settings alongside osteopaths, physiotherapists and other statutory regulated health professionals, who refer clients to them for medical reasons, will be able to continue treating these clients. Therapists who receive direct referrals from a statutory regulated health professional will be able to continue providing their therapy service.

If you are not sure if you premises is classed as a clinic or medical environment we would suggest clarification is obtained from your local health authority as ultimately it will be for enforcement agencies to determine if a practitioner is undertaking essential treatments for medical reasons.

When can I re-book clients in for?
